Wookey Hole Cinema Film for January 2018

Thursday January 11th at 7.30pm—'My Pure Land' (15)

Set in rural Pakistan, the story moves back and forth in time in a non-linear fashion—that balances the tension masterfully. The main action shows teenage girl Nazo (Suhaee Abro), her younger sister Saeda and their mother, resisting a group of bandits intent on entering and taking possession of their home. Flashbacks tell of how the family feud began, with happy family moments often tainted by the high tension between the girl's father and his younger brother Mehrban who claims to have a right to their house.

Mehrban uses his friendship with a ruthless police officer to get his brother arrested without a valid cause. Believing the women of the family to be completely vulnerable Mehrban sets out to take the house by force, but he is faced with an unexpected reaction. The Upcoming "My Pure Land is a gripping piece of imaginative film-making, one whose invention and power delay the connotations one would attach to a brief summary. While nationally a film about a land dispute in Pakistan (but that precis is more dry than the property in question, less fruitful, less powerful) this is a film as defiant of convention, of expectation, as the protagonist, an amazing expression of talent." Eye for Film
